Hohenstein-Ernstthal. The 85th Motorcycle Grand Prix on German soil is once again one for the record books. For the third time in a row, the MotoGP event at the Sachsenring has attracted a record number of spectators. A total of 252,826 visitors flocked to the iconic circuit in Hohenstein-Ernstthal over the course of the three-day event, with the attendance figure exceeding 250,000 for the first time. The only MotoGP round in Germany remains the biggest individual sporting event in Germany.

“We are thrilled with the third crowd record in a row, which shows that the fascination and enthusiasm for motorsport lives on. Quarter of a million visitors peacefully celebrated a real motorsport festival on four days. Our thanks go out to our loyal fans, as well as our volunteer helpers, without whom an event of this magnitude would not be possible. We are already looking forward to the next Grand Prix next summer,” said ADAC Sport President Dr. Gerd Ennser.
