Munich. Attention rally fans! Tickets for the rally event of the year are on sale now. The World Rally Championship (WRC) will start in three European countries – Germany, Austria and the Czech Republic – for the first time when it lines up at the Central European Rally from 26th to 29th October. The Rally Pass for € 99 allows admission to almost every special stage – extra tickets are only required for the two super special stages (SSS), Prague and Klatovy. Those who are quick enough to order their tickets can secure the Rally Pass “1 of 1000” for € 125 as an exclusive collector’s edition of the four-day ticket – a great offer for real rally enthusiasts! The ticket shop, together with any important information and exact pricing details, is online now at centraleuropeanrally.eu.

The Rally Pass for € 99 includes admission to all spectator areas on the special stages (with the exception of SSS Prague and Klatovy), as well as access to the service park in Passau. The rally visit is also attractive as a family outing, because children up to 16 years of age do not pay admission when accompanied by an adult. Collectors will be keen to get their hands on the special “1 of 1000” edition of the Rally Pass: instead of the “Print@Home” process for the Rally Pass, the special edition includes an extremely limited, numbered plastic ticket and lanyard. As an extra treat, anyone purchasing the “1 of 1000” edition goes into a draw, with five lucky winners receiving a ride on the Recce for the Central European Rally. Whether a “1 of 1000” ticket or a standard Rally Pass, all ticket holders have the opportunity to book a visit to the Klatovy super special stage at the same time with a discount of 50 percent (€ 17 instead of € 34 for a standing ticket). Standing room tickets in this package cost 17 euros (instead of 34 euros), and seat tickets at the Super Special Stage in Klatovy are then available for 34 euros (instead of 68 euros). Tickets for the super special stage in Prague, which promises to deliver full-throttle action around the city’s exhibition grounds, will go on sale with a special promotion shortly.

Stay up-to-date with information on the Central European Rally in the latest newsletter

Tickets for the individual days will also go on sale at a later date. Anyone not wishing to visit the ticket shop regularly can easily stay informed – simply subscribe to the ADAC Motorsport Newsletter on the rally homepage centraleuropeanrally.eu. Here, you can also regularly find the latest information on the event around the three-country border between Germany, Austria and the Czech Republic.
