Munich. The DTM and Eibach are going racing together in 2026. The chassis specialist from the Sauerland region has extended the successful partnership with the ADAC, which stretches back ten years, to now include the DTM. The striking red Eibach logo will be visible above all the DTM team garages in the pit lane. The new cooperation will be on display for the first time at the Essen Motor Show (28th November to 7th December). Eibach will present a Ford Mustang GT3 belonging to DTM team HRT Ford Performance at stand B35 in Hall 3.

"For a decade, the ADAC and Eibach have been brought together by a passion and fascination for motorsport," says Stephan Stöcker, Head of Development and Motorsport at Eibach. "Our shared history is defined by a desire to achieve peak performance and the will to consistently push the limits of physics when it comes to chassis performance. After a partnership spanning ten years in various support series, we are pleased to now be Official Supplier of the DTM - the leading racing series in Europe."

"In Eibach, we have acquired a strong partner for the DTM," stresses ADAC Motorsport Director Thomas Voss. "We are delighted to add the DTM to the long-term cooperation and, in doing so, to take that cooperation to a new level. Thanks to its involvement in Formula 1 and the World Rally Championship, Eibach has been rooted in international motorsport for many years. As such, it is the perfect fit for the DTM."

Eibach enjoys a worldwide reputation as one of the leading manufacturers of high-quality springs and chassis systems, as well as special technical springs for demanding applications. The range of applications is very diverse and includes almost all areas of industrial and automotive engineering. The Eibach Group - with Eibach Industries GmbH as the holding company - has its own production plants in Europe (Finnentrop, Germany), North America (Corona, CA, USA) and Asia (Taicang, China), and is also represented through its own engineering and distribution companies in Australia, England and South Africa. Eibach also serves customers in a further 80 countries through regional partners.
